Robbie

"You got in?" Mom and Dad both Verb - Past Tense Adverb at the same time, Mom immediately hugged me.

"My baby Verb - Past Tense..." she Verb - Present Tense, "...going to Hollywood Arts"

I wriggled away from her, rubbing my neck awkwardly, "Yeah, yeah. It's not that big a deal"

"It is too!" Mom Determiner, a little childishly, she always got so happy for me over the slightest achievement, "Loads of kids from that school go onto be big stars!" her eyes were shining.

"Doubt I'll be one of those lucky ones" I replied, folding my arms, "I'm going to go play X Box" I shuffled back into my room.

I practically live in my room now.

Mom and Dad...they can tell I'm a loser. From the friends I bring over sometimes.

We all go to Science Club together.

They go because they enjoy science.

I go because apparently I'm gifted at it and have to go.

But I'm not that great at saying no.

I'm not really that great at anything.

Being gifted in science doesn't make you awesome and it definitely doesn't get you a cute girlfriend.

And I should know, I've probably broken the world record for the most humiliating rejections ever.

Being stood up.

Having the girl you like encourage everyone to stand on tables and laugh at me every time I entered the room for a whole week.

I didn't do anything.

I

said I was a loser.

Not a tell-tale.
