Letter From School

Dear First Name,

I know you have Adverb been Verb - Present ends in ING like crazy since I moved away to college.

But I just wanted to let you know that things are Adverb Adjective here at Noun Noun University. They don't call it the home of the Adjective Noun for nothing, you know!

Even though I am still a freshman, I am fitting in just Adverb. I even have a new Adjective friend, First Name Last Name. We get along like peanut Noun and Noun. We are both in the same class, Introduction to Noun - Plural. My professors are all Adverb Adjective, too! Everyone thinks my math teacher is the Adjective Noun because of his thick Adjective Noun, but I think it's just an act to get us to pay attention to him during class.

Finally, I know you're worried about my Noun, but guess what? I actually got a part-time job

Verb - Present ends in ING Noun - Plural at a local newsstand. It pays the bills, but leaves me Adjective sometimes. Anyway, I hope things are as Adjective for you back home as they are for me up here in Place. I know you miss me, but as a famous American once wrote, "We shall Verb - Base Form each other when the Noun is Adjective."

With lots of love,
