The Volcanic Adventure

"John, are you ready? It'll be a long trip you know. Make sure you bring everything you need." I informed my brother. He rolled his eyes at me, and was slow in leaving. Although I was a total adventurer, he didn't like anything that included traveling . This time, we were driving up to Mount Shasta, a _____Adjective_____ volcano. As I sat in the car, I kept bouncing around _____Adverb_____. I was a total science nerd, and loved a challenge. My brother didn't seem to be quite as _____Adjective_____. He was _____Verb - Present Tense_____ around the house, pretending he had nowhere to go. I urged him on, and with an exasperated sigh, he got up on the car. After an hour, my dad pulled up in the parking lot. There was a _____Noun_____ in our conversation, as I marveled at the enormous peak. I leaped out of the car _____Adverb_____, and looked all around me. It was a beautiful sight. My brother groaned. We were going to be climbing Mount Shasta, and he was absolutely dreading it. I ran up to the mountain trail, and quickly climbed up the first bit. I looked back, and my brother was _____Adverb_____ making his way up. It was _____Adjective_____ work, but I enjoyed every minute of it. We couldn't climb all the way up, so we stopped and looked at the vast city below us. Then, we slowly made our way down. From this experience, I gained a memory I will never forget. I also respected the _____Adjective_____ mountain-climbers and their strenuous job.
