A Day in New York City

New York City is certainly not a _____Adjective_____ place. There is a lot of stuff to do, whether it's _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ a _____Noun_____, _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ at a fancy _____Noun_____, or just _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ the sights. There truly is no place like New York.

Also known as the Big _____Noun_____, New York is filled with all kinds of people, from millionaires to _____Noun - Plural_____, to college kids and young graduates looking to _____Verb - Base Form_____ their mark in the city. One of the coolest places to visit is Times Square, where you can _____Verb - Base Form_____ a _____Noun_____, _____Verb - Base Form_____ _____Noun_____, and _____Verb - Base Form_____ til you drop, all within the span of a few blocks

Of course, the best places are the ones that are tucked away far from the _____Noun - Plural_____. Even though Manhattan is actually a small _____Noun_____, it is jam-packed and it can be _____Adjective_____ to find your way around. A lot of New Yorkers these days rely on GPS, which stands for global _____Noun_____ _____Noun_____. They just whip out their _____Noun - Plural_____, punch a few _____Noun - Plural_____, and voila -- a synthesized voice tells them how to get wherever they need to go.

A lot of people _____Verb - Base Form_____ in New York but live in other places, like New Jersey or _____Place_____. The population of Manhattan actually doubles during the day because so many people _____Verb - Base Form_____ just
