Song by John Donne

Verse 1:love, I am not leaving you through weariness of you, nor in hope that the can display a more suitable for me. Rather since I will of necessity in the end, I may as well treat my existence and feign death by a succession of departures which are little Noun-Plural.
Verse 2: The Noun set last night, but Verb - Past Tense again today, and he has no Noun or feeling motivating him, and a much longer to make, so have confidence in me and have faith that my journeys will be swifter since I have more reasons to return.
Verse 3: How feeble our power which prevents us prolonging good luck or retrieving an hour of its duration. But we conspire with bad to make things worse.
Verse 4: When you sigh you are not sighing breath away but my, and when you, which is both sweetness and a torment, my life's decays. Surely you cannot verb - Base me, as you say, if you waste my being which is also your being Verse 5: Don't let yourAdjective - Ends in EST heart seemingly prophesy disaster for me, otherwise fate might second you and bring it about; rather consider it as though we had turned away to Two Noun

who keep one another alive, can thereby never be parted.
