Good Luck Nikki!

When I, your name, first met Nikki, I was only number years old. My plural noun weren't as adjective as they were back then, but Nikki seemed to like me anyways. I've always admired Nikki because she is so adjective and is really good at verb ending in ing. Without her in my life I would never verb again.

I was adjective when I first heard that Nikki was getting married. I have a lot of adjective advice to offer my adjective friend Nikki that will help her in her adjective marriage.

Nikki - don't forget to verb before you verb and verb. After the verb, you should always verb Ryan's noun and then Ryan should always verb your noun, twice. If times get adjective, be adjective, and give verb a try and see what happens. Follow my adjective advice and I guarantee you a lifetime of adjective and adjective.

PS: Have verb in Mexico! I hope Ryan is adjective with you on your wedding night!
