The Climate and Water Currents World Exploration Ch. 2

Chapter 2 Summary:

Zebra, Gorillas, Elephants and deserts

_____name 1_____ and _____name 2_____ headed north through the Semiarid and Tropical wet and dry climates of the savanna where they saw crocodiles _____munching or crunching_____ on wildebeest and lions _____hunting or stalking_____ zebra. One zebra decided to evade the lions by leaping in to _____name 1_____ and _____name 2_____ _____vehicle type_____. They _____sped or zoomed_____ away from the dangerous lions. The zebra brayed a, "Thanks for the rescue!" Then leapt off the _____same vehicle type_____.

_____name 1_____ and _____name 2_____ decided they'd like to see gorilla's in their natural habitat so they hopped in their _____same vehicle type_____ and headed north to the tropical wet rainforest in central Africa. Once there, they sold their _____same vehicle type_____ and made their way through the jungle on foot. Thunder roared. Lightning flashed. But neither Frank nor Alice shivered, it was _____a word to describe hot_____ hot. No wonder it rained so much here! The hot sun evaporated water from the Atlantic Ocean, filling the area with moisture. When the clouds became too full (which was often) the rain would come _____tumbling or plumiting_____ down out of the sky. It was bizarre to think that gorillas needed such a thick covering of fur in such a humid environment, but perhaps it helps camouflage them in the dark jungle.

After

the storm passed over, _____name 1_____ spied a family of gorillas. The gorillas were sitting on the ground munching on leaves. _____name 1_____ and Alice watched them for a while, but when it started to rain again, they decided it was time to go. They _____past tense synonym for walked_____ out of the jungle.

As they headed north the number of trees _____decreased or diminished_____. Instead of the lush green forest, they were now traveling through a grassy savanna. This was a semiarid region so the air was hot and dry. They saw a family of elephants _____synonym for walk_____ by, but they saw no giraffes, no zebras. When they stopped in town to have a lunch of _____food item_____ and _____food item_____ they overheard a fellow customer talking about how there used to be lions in the area, but now their numbers had dwindled to almost nil.

_____name 1_____ and _____name 2_____ would soon be crossing the Sahara desert, and had no desire to do so on foot so they rented a _____vehicle type_____. The drive across the desert was unpleasant. They eventually made it to Africa's western coast, where they hopped on a boat.
