A Dad and Son go to college

Once upon a time there was a very Adjective teenage and a Adjective father that went to college together. They both loved to Verb new things. The dad was a bit more Adjective strung then his son. And the son was a bit too Verb - Past Participle back for his fathers liking. In spite of these differences they formed a Noun and closeness that few dads and sons have. Relying on each other during the Number years it took them to get their degree was a great Noun experience for them both.

Whether it was Verb - Present Tense through discrete math or programing for hipster logic, they kept humor and Noun alive. Now that they have reached their goal and have graduated with degrees in Computer Science their lives will soon diverge. Its a fact though, that the mutual Noun, love and appreciation they have for each other is deper because of taking this journey together.
