TSA, Not Today

I was going to the Airport to get a flight to London. I was thrilled but I only had 1 hour to make the international flight which was pushing it. Then, I got to the security area. There was this very nice looking heavy set woman. Or at least I thought nice. I put my bag on the machine and wait to go through the scanner. I put my arms up and wait for the bar to fly past me. I make it through. However, my bag was not so lucky. I left a water bottle in. I couldn't believe what they did to me. The that I was a terrorist or Noun was too Adjective to handel. The woman began to pat me down in addition to the X-Ray.
First, she felt my private area and then gasped and said, "Ms. we're gonna have to ask you to go into this room for additional screening. I thought I would never be to drop my pants. WHAT! I scream. "No way". Finally, I do and had to get into this rubber thong like thing. I was told to lay on the table for a search. TOTALLY illegal. The woman said, please bend over and cough so I can be sure that you are clean. Let me add, this woman was violating me. After her for a while, your clean Miss, please leave. I'll tell you one thing, I was not Adjective at the TSA. I sent an Adjective letter to get an auto reply email apologizing. I was very Adjective and will never forget it.
