

Subject Pronoun or Possessive Adjective

1. Possessive Adjective _____
2. Subject Pronoun _____
3. Possessive Adjective _____
4. Subject Pronoun _____
5. Subject Pronoun _____
6. Subject Pronoun _____
7. Subject Pronoun _____
8. Subject Pronoun _____
9. Subject Pronoun _____
10. Subject Pronoun _____
11. Subject Pronoun _____
12. Subject Pronoun _____
13. Subject Pronoun _____
14. Possessive Adjective _____
15. Possessive Adjective _____
16. Subject Pronoun _____
17. Subject Pronoun _____
18. Subject Pronoun _____
19. Possessive Adjective _____
20. Possessive Adjective _____

Subject Pronoun or Possessive Adjective

Maria had to buy food for herself and _____ Possessive adjective _____ son. Divorced for ten years, _____ Subject pronoun _____ was used to doing the shopping for _____ Possessive adjective _____ son. _____ Subject pronoun _____ was a junior in high school, which meant that _____ Subject pronoun _____ would be entering college in two years. Then _____ Subject _____ pronoun _____ would be shopping only for herself. _____ Subject pronoun _____ felt sad when _____ Subject pronoun _____ thought of this. _____ Subject pronoun _____ hoped that _____ Subject pronoun _____ would attend the local junior college and then transfer to a university. That way _____ Subject pronoun _____ could continue to live at home for another two years. _____ Subject pronoun _____ loved him, and dreaded the day that _____ Subject pronoun _____ would no longer be _____ Possessive adjective _____ daily company.

Maria drove to Costco, a chain store that sold food in bulk packages. By selling in bulk only, the store helps _____ Possessive adjective _____ customers save money. _____ Subject pronoun _____ parked far from the entrance. That meant a longer walk, but also a faster exit from the parking lot. _____ Subject pronoun _____ grabbed one of the big shopping carts outside and pushed _____ Subject pronoun _____ into the store. _____ Possessive adjective _____ purse stayed tightly hung over _____ Possessive adjective _____ shoulder. Surprisingly, the store wasn't too crowded.

To be continued...

