My trip to Tokelau

I got of the plane and looked around at my surrondings. All I saw was _____Adjective_____, _____Color_____ flowers and a _____Adjective_____ blue sky. My family greeted me with hugs and welcomes. I said, " Hi, it's great to be here!". They rushed me into their _____Adjective_____ car and we started off for their _____Adjective_____ cottage. On the way there, I saw a field of panels and I turned to my cousin named _____First Name of a Person_____ and asked," What are those panels in the _____Color_____ field for?" he told me,"they are big solar panels that power our small island". When we got to the house, we ate a _____Adjective_____ meal and I asked more about the solar panels. My aunt _____First Name of a Person_____ told me that before the solar panels, the island was powered by _____Adjective_____ gasoline generators. New Zealand want to fix that, so they switched to solar power. Now, we run off of _____Adjective_____, reusable energy. Five days later I left and promised my family I would research solar panels and think about installing them in my home.
