A recipe for disaster

Sally and John were hanging out one _____Adjective_____ day and decided to make a _____flavor_____ cake. They had to gather the materials before they could begin baking, but they had trouble finding a few of them. Sally had a really _____Adjective_____ idea, "_____Interjection_____! I have a _____Adjective_____ idea! Why don't we just replace a few of the less _____Adjective_____ ingredients, like the _____food-plural_____?" Sally and John looked through John's _____room_____ to find a replacement. They settled on the old _____food_____, "This smells very fresh so it must be ok to use!," said John. There also weren't enough _____food_____ but John was able to find some smelly _____food-plural_____ that were the same color. When their gross creation was finally ready to be put in the oven to bake the entire kitchen was covered in _____Noun_____. When the cake came out, it smelled like _____Adjective_____ _____food_____. Sally and John decided to throw the cake away and go to the _____place_____ instead.
