The Golden Rascals

"Sir, look out!" Chris yelled. Lillian _____Verb - Past Tense_____ around in time to throw up her forcefield, stopping the huge, _____Adjective_____ _____Noun_____ in its tracks. It bounced off of the shield and _____Verb - Past Tense_____, stunned for the moment. Chris took the opportunity to leap onto its _____Part of Body_____ and catch it around the neck, bringing it to its knees. "Ally!" he called.

Alejandro pulled a long _____Noun_____ from a well-worn copy of "Tales of King Arthur" and took a running leap at the creature. Just before he plunged the _____Noun_____ into its _____Part of Body_____, Chris _____Verb - Past Tense_____ off, giving Alejandro full access. The creature _____Verb - Past Tense_____ in pain, then slumped over, dead.

"Not bad," Lillian commented, brushing off her _____Noun - Plural_____. "But we really must start questioning Marconi more _____Adverb_____ when he sends us off on these mad _____Noun - Plural_____."

Alejandro removed his _____Noun_____ from the beast's gut and wiped it on its fur. "But I still don't understand," he mused. "What on earth could have caused this thing to attack these _____Noun - Plural_____? They didn't hunt it; it didn't eat them. Why did it bother?"

"Some _____Noun - Plural_____ are just pure evil," Lillian said, _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____.

But

Chris's assessment was less _____Adjective_____. "Could it perhaps have been _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ something?" he asked, pointing to the cave whence the beast had come. "If it felt _____Adjective_____, it may have been acting on a kind of 'it's me or them' instinct. As if on cue, a low keen issued from within the _____Noun_____. The Rascals exchanged nervous _____Noun - Plural_____, then carefully crept inside.

They hadn't gone far when, sure enough, they found a nest made of _____Noun - Plural_____, strips of _____Noun_____, and _____Noun - Plural_____ - and in the middle of it was a small, _____Adjective_____ animal, crying for its mother. When the baby caught sight of them, its croons grew louder.

Lillian _____Verb - Past Tense_____. "Well that makes me feel like a _____Noun_____," she said. "What do you reckon we should -" She stopped when she saw the look on Chris's face. "Oh no," she said. "No, Chris, we are not _____Verb - Present Tense_____ it."

Chris practically had stars in his _____Part of Body_____. "Oh but Sir, look at it," he cooed, _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ next to the nest and scratching the creature's _____Noun_____. It _____Verb - Past Tense_____ happily at him. " And we've just killed its mother, after all. It's the least we can do."

Lillian looked to Alejandro for support, but he only _____Verb - Past Tense_____. "So long as he keeps it away from my books..." he said.

Lillian

_____Verb - Past Tense_____. It seemed that the Golden Rascals had acquired a new _____Noun_____.
