Gettysburg Address

Four score and seven _____ Noun - Plural _____ ago our _____ Noun - Plural _____ brought forth on this continent a new _____ Noun _____, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are _____ Verb - Past Tense _____ equal.

Now we are _____ Verb - Past Tense _____ in a great civil _____ Noun _____, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great _____ nounONE _____ of that war. We have come to _____ Verb - Base Form _____ a portion of that _____ nounONE _____, as a final _____ Verb - Present ends in ING _____ Noun _____ for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us--that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion--that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain--that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom--and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.
