There has been a lot of talk about the amount of crime in downtown _____proper noun--place_____ lately and people wondering why there is so much. I think the answer is simple.

I have lived in _____proper noun--place_____ all of my 62-plus years, and when I was growing up all the _____Noun - Plural_____ were on the outskirts or in the country, mostly out of sight. People _____Verb - Past Tense_____ them there because of the riffraff they attracted. Nowadays it seems the idea by city planners is to attract as many _____Noun - Plural_____ as possible to downtown. They even _____Verb - Past Tense_____ the _____Noun - Plural_____ so they can _____verb--present_____ on Sunday.

Attract _____Noun - Plural_____, then you _____verb--present_____ _____Noun - Plural_____ and with them comes crime. Close the beer joints disguised as _____Noun - Plural_____, get them out of town and the riffraff follows them and _____Noun_____ goes down, leaving only law-abiding people to _____verb--present_____ a safer _____Noun_____.

_____Noun - Plural_____ don't need alcohol to be successful. Look around, there are lots of them around who don't _____verb--present_____ alcohol, yet they thrive _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ good _____Noun - Plural_____ at a fair price. The ones who say they have to have alcohol sales to _____verb--present_____ need people to _____verb--present_____ the booze so they don't notice the _____Noun_____ is terrible or overpriced.
