Zoo trip

Yesterday, my mom took my little sister and I to the zoo. My sister was so Verb - Past Participle that she couldn't sit still. As soon as my mom pulled the car into the parking lot, she Verb - Past Tense out of the car and Verb - Past Tense towards the entrance. Once inside, she insisted on seeing the lions first. She looked awestruck when the Noun roared, taking in the lion's sharp Noun - Plural and wicked glance.

Next, we saw the giraffes.

"Look at their long necks!" she exclaimed, mimicking how the giraffes elongated their necks and used their tongues to eat Preposition or subordinating conjunction from the tall trees.

The monkeys and gorillas were next. My sister loved how they Verb - Past Tense on the tree branches by their arms. We even saw a monkey holding her baby in her arms as she climbed up a Noun.

My sister Preposition or subordinating conjunction on seeing the gigantic elephants next. We watched the elephants as they sucked in the murky Noun and then Verb - Past Tense the water back out, splashing everyone within a Adjective distance.

After a long and tiring day, my mom Preposition or subordinating conjunction that we eat ice cream and then head back home. My sister complained that she had wanted to see more Noun - Plural, but it was growing Adjective and the zoo would close soon. I bought a Noun ice cream and my sister got a vanilla ice cream.

"Goodbye zoo," my sister Preposition or subordinating conjunction as we headed back to the car, "see you again soon."
