From Slow to Fast

There was once a very slow and young _____ Noun named Alfred. Alfred loved to run but he couldn't run fast at all. Alfred had short _____ Adjective legs which didn't help him run fast at all. Everyday after school he would run around the field near his house sweating until he couldn't feel his legs. He then would walk home stumbling on his every step. His friends would make fun of him, _____ Adverb nudging each other trying hard not to giggle. Alfred always noticed he was being laughed at, but he didn't care at all. He just _____ Verb - Past Tense on and took no notice of them. Even though _____ Pronoun didn't care about being made fun of, he was afraid to admit some things. For instance whenever Alfred ran _____ Preposition _____ something, he would almost trip over his weak legs. He always looked up videos about track runners. " WOW !", he would say when he saw them running. He liked the way they ran, _____ he wanted to run but he wanted to run faster than them. Then one day in 3rd grade, he was able to run as fast as his classmates. He was even faster than some of them. It happened all of a sudden and it was a big surprise to him, but he liked it.
