Casper Spellings, The Animal Kid

Casper Spellings was a kid unlike any other kid. He had a pet _____ Animal Noun that liked to sleep in _____ Place Noun, a _____ Animal Noun named _____ Proper Person Noun, the tiniest _____ Animal Noun you've ever seen, and a big, lazy _____ Animal Noun that ate _____ Noun - Plural for breakfast.

Yes, Casper Spellings was what we call an animal person. In fact, he was SO much an animal person that he wore _____ Clothing Noun with _____ Animal Noun on them, _____ Clothing Noun with _____ Animal Noun on them, and _____ Clothing Noun with _____ Animal Noun on them.

Whenever Casper went walking by, people stopped and stared. _____ Proper Person Noun would say, "There goes the animal boy!" _____ Proper Person Noun would say, "Oh, look, it's Casper the Cat, Koala, Kangaroo, and every other animal lover!"

Casper didn't mind. He loved animals and he didn't mind everyone know it. That is, until he got to second grade at _____ Proper School Noun. His classmates there decided that it wasn't cool to love animals so much. So, they made fun of him.

Casper felt sad. He hid beside _____ Noun, underneath _____ Noun, and even in _____ Proper Place Noun.

But nothing made him feel better. Then, one day, he had an idea.

next day, there were colorful invitations on everyone's desks, even _____ Proper Person Noun and _____ Proper _____ Person Noun desks, the meanest kids in the class. They opened their envelopes carefully. They had been invited for a special show at _____ Proper Place Noun the next day at 4pm! What could it mean?

The next day at 4pm all the kids from the third grade class gathered at the chosen spot. All they could see was a large red and white striped tent. Suddenly, Casper appeared, dressed in all in black, even his _____ Clothing _____ Noun and _____ Clothing Noun were black!

"Let the circus begin!" Casper yelled! The third graders watched in amazement as Casper led all his pets out from the tent. They watched for two hours as the animals performed different tricks and stunts. The kids were speechless.

After the day at the Casper's circus, no one ever made fun of Casper again for loving animals. In fact, they loved animals now, too.
