Lincoln

Four Noun - Plural and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this Noun, a new nation, conceived in Liberty, and Verb - Past Tense to the proposition that all Noun - Plural are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, Verb - Present ends in ING whether that nation, or any Noun so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a Adjective battle-field of that war. We have come to Verb - Base Form a portion of that field, as a final resting Noun for those who here gave their lives that that Noun might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not Verb - Base Form -- we can not consecrate -- we can not hallow -- this ground. The brave Noun - Plural, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they Verb - Past Tense here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us -- that from these honored Noun - Plural we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion -- that we here highly resolve that these Noun - Plural shall not have died in vain -- that this nation, under Noun, shall have a new birth of Noun -- and that government of the Noun, by the Noun, for the people, shall not perish from the Noun.
