worst case scenario and the survival hand book

When your stranded on a           Noun                     Noun           it is always important to stay           Adjective          . If you have someone with you that is the best case, but if you don't you better be ready for a long and           Adjective           time. The best thing you can find is           Noun          . Don't worry about           Noun           until you have a safe warm place near           Noun          , and not the ocean. If you can't find           Noun          , then I can't help you, but most people end up finding or           Verb - Present Tense           some water. Even though sports           Noun - Plural           are helpful they are not alternative to           Noun          . As soon as you are comfortable start having           Noun - Plural           so that a plane or helicopter can see you. If you don't have any           Noun           to send someone you might want to think of living on this           Noun          , because you're not going anywhere soon.
