Val's Dilemma

Once upon a time in a far away land called Arvestia, there was a young woman by the name of Val I. Preferred.

She was considered to be a very important Noun in Arvestia, so she had many important Noun - Plural in her possession. One day, she decided that she needed to find a special place to keep all of these Noun - Plural. She decided that she would travel all around Arvestia to find the perfect spot. She started her search at a convenience store by the name of Quik Trip. "Do you have a place that I can secure my very important Noun - Plural?" Val asked the man behind the counter. "No, but we have a variety of fountain Noun - Plural for you to enjoy," he replied. That would not work for Val. She moved on to an Adjective eatery by the name of Roosters. "Do you have a place that I can secure my very important Noun - Plural?" Val asked the Adjective owner. "No, but we make the Adjective biscuits and gravy in town. Would you like some?" he replied. Val politely declined the offer and continued on her way. She made her way down the Noun and came upon Arvest Bank. The building looked so Adjective and Adjective that she decided to stop in. She hadn't had any luck and thought she would try one more time. "Do you have a place that I can secure my very important Noun - Plural?" she pleaded. "Why of course we do!" replied the Arvest Bank Noun. "We have a variety of Safe Deposit Box sizes and prices to offer. We would be so Adjective to open one for you!" Val was so thrilled that she had finally found a place to keep all of her important Noun - Plural! The Noun offered Val coffee and popcorn while they prepared her Safe Deposit Box. Once it was ready, she placed all of her Noun - Plural in it and locked it right up. "What a wonderful Noun!" exclaimed Val as she was
