The Ear Inn

Built in 1817, The Ear Inn was originally the home of James Brown, a _____ Adjective man who is believed to have been an _____ Noun to George Washington during the _____ Proper Noun. After the war, James Brown settled in New York and was the proprietor of a _____ Noun store on the ground floor of the house.

When James built the tavern, its location was only a few feet from the _____ Noun of the _____ Proper Noun River, where much of his _____ Noun came in and out from the south and Europe.

Records show that Brown sold the building to two _____ Noun - Plural in 1835, and it officially opened as a _____ Noun, making it one of the oldest _____ Noun - Plural in New York City.

In 1890 an Irish _____ Noun named Thomas Cloke bought the building, and ran the tavern that was frequented mostly by _____ Noun. The tavern had a _____ Noun that was later turned into a _____ Noun.

Cloke sold the business in 1919 in anticipation of _____ Noun. During which time, the restaurant became a _____ Noun, and the upstairs became home to a _____ Noun, a headquarters for _____ Noun - Plural and a brothel.

After Prohibition, the bar re-opened, but had no name, though it was _____ Adverb referred to as "The _____ Adjective

_____," and its motto was, "_____. At this point in time, it was "men only," and most of the male _____ were waterfront workers, who _____, _____ and _____.

In the mid-1900s, the area declined, as urban decay turned the area into an _____.

In 1969, the building was one of the first few to be designated by the city as a _____.

Then in the mid 1970s, a group of struggling _____ bought the building, and in 1977, they reopened the bar. The new owners wanted to change the name out front that read " _____" to "The _____," after a _____ magazine the group _____ upstairs. However, _____ buildings had restrictions on changing signage, so to get around it, they _____ out part of the letter _____ in "Bar," turning it into the word "_____."

Today there are rumors that ghosts have been _____ and _____. One in particular named " _____" who's still waiting for his _____ to _____.
