A BHSS Mad-Lib

Once upon a           Noun          , there was a synagogue called BHSS. It was located in Mahwah, NJ, and it served the Jews of Rockland and Bergen Counties. It was a really special place, with           Adjective           staff and clergy,           Adjective           lay leaders, and           Adjective           members. The congregation           Verb - Past Tense           hard,           Verb - Past Tense           hard, and made the world more           Adjective           because they were in it. One particular group-- the Eternal           Noun - Plural          , gave especially generously to make the           Adjective           work of the congregation possible. They gathered but once a year to eat and drink and enjoy each other's           Noun          , but their generosity of spirit was appreciated year round. So let's lift a glass and toast a l'chaim to our Eternal Lights!
