A Cooking Disaster

On a sunny afternoon in April, I past to make dinner for my family. "I future progressive all day, " I thought. "I should present-I all of my other plans." Just as I past perfect calling my friends to tell them I past progressive-I, the doorbell rang. "I present progressive-I!" I shouted. When I reached the door, there was no one there. The doorbell past perfect me trouble in the past, so I thought, "If anyone was really there, they future." I turned back to the kitchen and past progressive-I a cloud of smoke. "The meatballs! They present progressive-they!" I trashed the meatballs, but the terribly heavy scent past. "We all future perfect by the time I present-I to cook," I sighed. Suddenly, the sound of the doorbell echoed through the smoke. "Whoever it was present perfect-it," I reasoned. Before I past perfect feeling my way to the door, three masked men past through with a hose. "A friend of yours past to tell us you past progressive-you," one of the men explained. "We thought we past perfect you in time, but it looks like we future progressive your kitchen for a while."
