Neoliberal Mad Libs

As you would expect from a _____Adjective_____ philosophy, neoliberalism has answers to stereotypical philosophical questions such as "Why are we here" and "What should I do?". We are here for the _____Noun_____, and you should _____Verb_____. Humans exist for the market, and not the other way around: certainly in the sense that it is _____Adjective_____ to participate in the market, and that those who do not participate have _____Verb - Past Participle_____ in some way. In personal ethics, the general neoliberal vision is that every human being is an entrepreneur _____Verb - Present Tense_____ their own life, and should act as such. Moral philosophers call this a virtue _____Adjective_____, where human beings compare their actions to the way an ideal type would act - in this case the ideal _____Noun_____. Individuals who choose their friends, hobbies, sports, and partners, to maximise their status with future employers, are _____Adjective_____. This attitude - not unusual among _____Adjective_____ students - is unknown in any pre-existing moral philosophy, and is absent from early liberalism. Such social actions are not necessarily monetarised, but they represent an _____Noun_____ of the market principle into non-economic area of life - again _____Adjective_____ for neoliberalism.
