The Hound of the Baskervilles by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

"How did you know what I was doing? I believe you have eyes in the back of your"
"I have, at least, a well-polished, coffee-pot in front of me," said he. "But, tell me, Watson, what do you make of our visitor's? Since we have been so unfortunate as to miss him and have no notion of his errand, this souvenir becomes of importance. Let me hear you reconstruct the by an examination of it."
"I think," said I, following as far as I could the methods of my companion, "that Dr is a successful, Adjective man, well-esteemed since those who know him give him this mark of their appreciation."
"Good!" said Holmes. "!" "I think also that the probability is in favour of his being a country practitioner who does a great deal of his
"Why so?"
"Because this stick, though originally a very handsome one has been so knocked about that I can hardly imagine a town practitioner carrying it. The thick-iron is worn down, so it is evident that he has done a
