Income Tax Day

Tax Day is the day that income taxes are due from American citizens. Although income tax was first collected once during the _____<sup>Noun</sup> war, it was not collected yearly until 1913 when the 16th Amendment was added to the Constitution giving _____<sup>Name of a person</sup> the legal authority to tax people's incomes. It has been on April 15 that income taxes are due.

The concept of taxing income is a modern innovation and presupposes several things: a money economy, reasonably accurate accounts, a common understanding of _____<sup>Plural noun</sup> _____<sup>Plural noun</sup> and _____<sup>Plural noun</sup> and an orderly society with reliable records. For most of the history of civilization, these preconditions did not exist, and taxes were based on other factors. Taxes on wealth, social position, and ownership of the means of production, typically land and _____<sup>Plural noun</sup> were all common. Practices such as _____<sup>Verb ending in ing</sup> or an offering of _____<sup>Plural noun</sup> existed from ancient times, and can be regarded as a precursor of the income tax, but they lacked precision and certainly were not based on a concept of _____<sup>Verb ending in ing</sup> _____<sup>Plural noun</sup>.
