How They Met

You might already know this, but Danielle and Brandt met at California Institute of the Arts, a Adjective conservatory just outside of LA. Although they belonged to the same Noun consisting of thirty students, Danielle and Brandt managed not to know of one another's existence until the Halloween Event a Unit of Time into their first semester. Danielle Verb - Past Tense him first across a crowd of over a thousand Noun - Plural (drunk party goers); he was standing in a circle of friends, at ease and Verb - Present ends in ING, and Verb - Past Tense as a whiteboard, with pens for people to scrawl on his costume. She thought that he shone; he was so full of Noun and Noun. But she was Adjective and didn't want to let him know how much she found herself liking him at first One of the Five Senses. So instead, she snuck around behind him, Verb - Past Tense one of the pens while he was talking to other people, and Verb - Past Tense the words 'You're so hot' on his back before deftly slipping back into the Noun.

They didn't wind up actually meeting for another Number hours, when they ran into each other outside the Location; both were Adjective as judges, both searching for their mutual friend, First Name of a Person, who was very Adjective and whom they were both Verb - Past Tense about. (Now First Name of Same Person celebrates more moderately.) Up to that point, Brandt had earnestly been searching, but when he met Danielle (who was Verb - Past Tense as a wood nymph), his motivations (he admits Unit of Time later) shifted slightly from looking for First Name of Same Person to looking at the
