John's First One

Have you ever walked into a _____ Place _____ and found a _____ Thing _____?

No, not the _____ Adjective _____ kind, but a _____ Adjective _____ Noun _____ with _____ Adjective _____ Body _____

Part - Plural _____ and _____ Adjective _____ Body Part _____? The kind that snarls as you enter, like a beast about to pounce? The kind that roots you to the spot with its sunken, hypnotic eyes, rendering you unable to flee as you watch the _____ Adjective _____ Noun _____ uncoil from the shadows? Has your _____ Body Part _____ started racing though your _____ Body Part _____ refuse to? Have you felt time slow as the _____ Thing _____ crosses the Place _____ in the darkness of a blink?

Have you shuddered with _____ Feeling _____ when it places one _____ Adjective _____ Body Part _____ atop your Body Part _____ and another under your _____ Body Part _____ so it can tilt you, exposing your _____ Body Part _____?

Have you squirmed as its _____ Adjective _____, _____ Adjective _____ Body Part _____ slides down your Body Part _____, over your _____ Body Part _____, to your _____ Body Part _____, in a slithering search that's seeking your artery? Have you felt its _____ Adjective _____ breath release in a hiss against your skin when it probes your pulse--the flow that leads to your brain? Has its _____ Body Part _____ rested there, throbbing slightly as if savoring the moment? Have you then experienced a sinking, sucking blackness as you discover that not all

Noun - Plural _____ feed on blood--some feed on _____ Thing _____?

Well, have you?

Maybe not. But let me rephrase the question:

Have you ever walked into a _____ Place _____ and suddenly forgotten why you came in?
