John Fairbairn

Skeleton is a Noun where Verb - Non 3rd Person Singular Present as Adverb as you can with a Verb - Present Tense start on a very Adjective sled. The Noun is very Adjective because you go down an Adjective track with no protection Body Part first, and it is faster than a car on a highway.

John Fairbairn is a skeleton racer at the 2014 Winter Olympic Games. He was born in London, Ontario and grew up in Calgary, Alberta. John loved track and field and started skeleton racing at the age of 22 in 2006.

In four years from 2006, he started racing in the World Cup and went to the Vancouver Olympics as a forerunner for the team, to test the track.

Fairbairn enjoys reading books about nerd topics. John is a mechanical engineer. His nickname is "Brain" because while he was racing in Germany, his name was mispronounced as Fairbrain.

In Sochi, he passed the finish line 7th with a time of 56.96 seconds.

John's favourite motto is: if it wasn't hard, everyone would do it
