More stories at WordBlanks.com

Adventures of cohort C

1. Adverb _____

Adventures of cohort C

This week's adventures with cohort C. Anne stepped in for team Bog and walked through two solo walks to her community contract. Exploration time gave quite the surprise for Angela's group almost leaving a pair of boots _____Adverb_____. At the suspension bridge, Jenna discovers that her students had brought a crab all the way up from the harbor to the suspension bridge. A child who pushed so many personal boundaries with the support of his team had Katie lead them up the canopy tower twice. With low tides brings a delicious treat for juvinelle eagle's meal giving Jennifer's kiddos a front row seat to lunch and a show. Deirdre's colossal of handwritten solo cards inspired her students to write their own just to do another solo walk. With only a time frame of 30 minutes, Regina changed her schedule to the art studio because her students wanted to make signs and posters about how they can protect the environment when they go home. How often does one see two rainbows in one day? POWER! Was on the response Laurel's students gave at the end of Each One Teach One except one. Team stream and Kat are among the few of such a sight. Yanni's jaunt down to the harbor left one of her students completely covered in mud. Elizabeth learned that even 5th graders have sarcasm over ketchup. Despite feeling less than 100%, Paco was a super trooper for his kiddos and stuck the week through, and liaisoning!

©2026 WordBlanks.com · All Rights Reserved.