Mary, the Explorer

Mary, oh, Adjective Mary has been looking for some time, now. She searched Adjective, she searched low, she searched here, she searched Adject. Mary searched in the Noun, she searched in the pantry, she Verb-Past Tense in the laundry hamper, but she found it when she least expected it. Last night, as she was hanging her sister Rebekah's Noun in the closet, she found it. Stepping into the Noun to get a better reach, she found herself not in a Adjective closet, but a wood, and facing her was a creature with Adjective skin, curly Noun, Adjective eyes, a short pointed Noun, Part of Body on his forehead, cloven hooves, Animal legs with glossy black Part of Body, a strange but pleasant little face, and a long Part of Body. He was only a little taller than Mary herself. "Good gracious, me!" he exclaimed, dropping his parcels.
