Literary Mad Libs

All the world's a Noun,

And all the Noun - Plural and women merely players;

They have their exits and their entrances,

And one man in his time Verb - Present ends in S many parts,

His Noun - Plural being Adjective ages. At first, the infant,

Verb - Present ends in ING and Verb - Present ends in ING in the nurse's arms.

Then the whining schoolboy, with his satchel

And shining morning face, Verb - Present ends in ING like Noun

Unwillingly to Verb - Base Form. And then the lover,

Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad

Made to his mistress' Noun. Then a soldier,

Full of Adjective oaths and bearded like the Noun,

Jealous in honor, sudden and quick in quarrel,

Seeking the bubble reputation

Even in the possessive noun mouth.
