Jasper Rabbit loved eating those tasty carrots. He made sure to stop at the Noun, morning, evening, and night. Carrots were Jasper's Adjective food, until they started to follow him. Jasper could hear the sound, tunktunktunk, of the carrots moving behind him. At night-time when he was Verb - Present ends in ING his teeth, he saw them staring back at him through the mirror. He quickly turned around, but the Adjective carrots were no where to be seen. The next day, around, so Jasper assumed that they were in his Noun.

This

wasn't true because when he returned home, he cried out to his mom. He swore that he saw those Adjective carrots in the shed. His mother checked. She didn't see anything. At night-time again, he saw a shadow of a creepy carrot on his bed-room Noun. He called his dad.

They searched under the bed, and through the closet and dresser.

No creepy carrots were found. Both of his parents told him that creepy carrots do not exist. However, at the end of the week, Jasper was Verb - Present ends in ING them everywhere. His parents had to be wrong, and Jasper had to do something about it. On Saturday, he grabbed his supplies and built a strong Adjective wall around the carrot field.

This would keep the carrots from bothering him. What Jasper didn't know, was the carrots wanted that big wall to keep him away!
