Pride and Prejudice intro

It is a Noun universally acknowledged, that a single Noun in possession of a Adjective fortune, must be in want of a Noun.

However little known the Noun - Plural or views of such a man may be on his first Verb - Present ends in ING a neighbourhood, this truth is so well Verb - Past Tense in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered the rightful Noun of some one or other of their daughters.

"My dear Mr. Bennet," said his lady to him one day, "have you heard that Netherfield Park is let at last?"

Mr. Bennet replied that he had not.

"But it is," returned she; "for Mrs. Long has just been here, and she Verb - Past Tense me all about it."

Mr. Bennet made no Noun.

"Do you not want to know who has Verb - Past Tense it?" cried his wife impatiently.

"You want to Verb - Base Form me, and I have no objection to hearing it."

This was invitation enough.

"Why, my dear, you must know, Mrs. Long says that Netherfield is taken by a young Noun of large Noun from the north of England; that he came down on Monday in a chaise and four to see the place, and was so much Adjective with it, that he agreed with Mr. Morris immediately; that he is to take possession before Michaelmas, and some of his Noun - Plural are to be in the house by the end of next week."

"What is his name?"

"Bingley."

"Is he married or single?"

"Oh! Adjective, my dear, to be sure! A single man of large fortune; four or five thousand a year. What a fine thing for our girls!"

"How so? How can it affect them?"

"My dear Mr. Bennet," replied his wife, "how can you be so Adjective! You must know that I am thinking of his Verb - Present ends in ING one of them."

"Is that his design in settling here?"

"Design! Nonsense, how can you talk so! But it is very likely that he may fall in Noun with Number of them, and therefore you must Verb - Base Form him as soon as he comes."

"I see no occasion for that. You and the Noun - Plural may go, or you may send them by themselves, which perhaps will be still better, for as you are as Adjective as any of them, Mr. Bingley may like you the best of the party."

"My dear, you flatter me. I certainly have had my share of beauty, but I do not pretend to be anything Adjective now. When a woman has Number Adjective daughters, she ought to give over thinking of her own beauty."

"In such cases, a woman has not often much beauty to think of."

"But, my dear, you must indeed go and see Mr. Bingley when he comes into the neighbourhood."

"It is more than I engage for, I assure you."

"But consider your daughters. Only think what an establishment it would be for one of them. Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general, you know, they visit no Noun - Plural. Indeed you must go, for it will be impossible for us to Verb - Base Form him if you do not."

"You are over-scrupulous, surely. I dare say Mr. Bingley will be very Adjective to see you; and I will send a few lines by you to assure him of my hearty consent to his Verb - Present ends in ING whichever he chooses of the Noun - Plural; though I must throw in a good word for my little Lizzy."

"I desire you will do no such thing. Lizzy is not a bit better than the others; and I am sure she is not half so Adjective as Jane, nor half so Adjective as Lydia. But you are always giving her the preference."

"They have none of them much to recommend them," replied he; "they are all silly and Adjective like other girls; but Lizzy has something more of Noun than her sisters."

"Mr. Bennet, how can you Verb - Base Form your own Noun - Plural in such a way? You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion for my poor Noun - Plural."

"You mistake me, my dear. I have a high respect for your Noun - Plural. They are my old friends. I have heard you mention them with consideration these last twenty years at least."

"Ah, you do not know what I suffer."

"But I hope you will get over it, and live to see many young Noun of four thousand a year come into the neighbourhood."

"It will be no use to us, if Number such should come, since you will not visit them."

"Depend upon it, my dear, that when there are Number, I will Verb - Base Form them all."
