pride and prejudice 2

It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a Adjective man in possession of a good Noun, must be in want of a wife.

However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a Noun, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered the rightful property of some one or other of their Noun - Plural.

"My dear Mr. Bennet," said his lady to him one day, "have you heard that Netherfield Park is let at last?"

Mr. Bennet replied that he had not.

"But it is," returned she; "for Mrs. Long has just been here, and she told me all about it."

Mr. Bennet made no Noun.

"Do you not want to know who has Verb - Past Tense it?" cried his wife impatiently.

"You want to Verb - Base Form me, and I have no objection to hearing it."

This was invitation enough.

"Why, my dear, you must know, Mrs. Long says that Netherfield is taken by a young man of large Noun from the north of England; that he came down on Monday in a chaise and four to see the place, and was so much delighted with it, that he agreed with Mr. Morris immediately; that he is to take possession before Michaelmas, and some of his servants are to be in the house by the end of next week."

"What is his name?"

"Bingley."

"Is he married or single?"

"Oh! Adjective, my dear, to be sure! A Adjective man of large Noun; four or five thousand a year. What a fine thing for our Noun - Plural!"

"How so? How can it affect them?"

"My dear Mr. Bennet," replied his wife, "how can you be so tiresome! You must know that I am thinking of his Verb - Present ends in ING one of them."

"Is that his design in settling here?"

"Design! Nonsense, how can you talk so! But it is very likely that he may fall in love with one of them, and therefore you must visit him as soon as he comes."

"I see no occasion for that. You and the Noun - Plural may go, or you may send them by themselves, which perhaps will be still better, for as you are as Adjective as any of them, Mr. Bingley may like you the best of the party."

"My dear, you flatter me. I certainly have had my share of Noun, but I do not pretend to be anything extraordinary now. When a woman has five grown-up Noun - Plural, she ought to give over thinking of her own beauty."

"In such cases, a woman has not often much beauty to think of."

"But, my dear, you must indeed go and see Mr. Bingley when he comes into the neighbourhood."

"It is more than I engage for, I assure you."

"But consider your daughters. Only think what an establishment it would be for one of them. Sir William and Lady Lucas are determined to go, merely on that account, for in general, you know, they _____ Verb - Base Form no newcomers. Indeed you must _____ Verb - Base Form, for it will be impossible for us to visit him if you do not."

"You are _____ Adjective, surely. I dare say Mr. Bingley will be very glad to see you; and I will send a few lines by you to assure him of my hearty consent to his _____ Verb - Present ends in ING whichever he chooses of the girls; though I must throw in a good word for my little Lizzy."

"I desire you will do no such thing. Lizzy is not a bit better than the others; and I am sure she is not half so _____ Adjective as Jane, nor half so _____ Adjective as Lydia. But you are always giving her the preference."

"They have none of them much to recommend them," replied he; "they are all silly and ignorant like other _____ Noun - Plural; but Lizzy has something more of quickness than her sisters."

"Mr. Bennet, how can you _____ Verb - Base Form your own _____ Noun - Plural in such a way? You take delight in vexing me. You have no compassion for my poor nerves."

"You mistake me, my dear. I have a high respect for your _____ Noun - Plural. They are my old friends. I have heard you mention them with consideration these last _____ Number years at least."

"Ah, you do not know what I suffer."

"But I hope you will get over it, and live to see many young _____ Noun - Plural of four thousand a year come into the neighbourhood."

"It will be no use to us, if twenty such should come, since you will not visit them."

"Depend upon it, my dear, that when there are _____ Number, I will _____ Verb - Base Form them all."
