The Night We Fell In Love

It was a _____Adjective_____ and _____Adjective_____ night... Or, it was a typical fall evening in October when it all began:

"Come over" she said. "Help Dad and me put some _____Noun_____ on a half-wall," she asked.

So, he naively packed a few tools, and at the end of a long day, after a week of playing _____Profession_____, drove _____Number_____ minutes to the crowded little _____Type of Building_____.

But, as carefully laid-out plans do, nothing went as expected. It was not just putting wall board on a partial _____Noun_____ like the _____Adjective_____ curly-haired _____Animal_____ said. Oh, no! There was much _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____, designing, and _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ that needed to be done. Even then, as the evening slowly turned to night, everyone realized that just strengthening the _____Adjective_____ wall above the stairwell wasn't going to be enough.

"Wait!" her dad (the unknowing chaperone) exclaimed excitedly. While raising his _____Part of Body_____ _____Adverb_____, he continued, "We can support the wall with the 150-year-old porch pillar we have out in the _____Room of a House_____!" (Because, be truthful, who doesn't have one of those laying around?)

three workers diligently set out on the new path, determined to modify the old column. They spent quality time pondering and re-pondering the best and most over-built way to accomplish this! At last, they decided to _____Verb_____ the column to the half wall and tie into the roof rafters. There was a _____Adjective_____ energy in the air. There was a _____Kind of Tool_____ saw to use. Dimensions were taken, checked, and re-confirmed _____Number_____ more times. Explanations of how to use tools were patiently accepted. Politics and religion were discussed as the air _____Kind of Tool_____ shot nails into studs (the _____Adjective_____ variety of course). The project moved on...

As early night turned into late night, and midnight became early morning, the old Victorian column found a new home, the half wall strengthened, 2 _____Adjective_____ middle-aged _____Animal (plural)_____ started to fall in love.
