April's Sad Lesson

Once there was a little           Noun           named April who loved to eat           Noun          . One day, when she was supposed to be learning           Adjective           dancing, she quietly tiptoed into the kitchen for just a           Adjective           treat. Once in the kitchen, she found the most           Adjective           little           Noun           sitting on the           Noun          . Oodles of           Noun           frosting was piped           Adverb           on the top in a beautiful           Adjective           design. The little           Noun           knew she shouldn't, but she just had to have one tiny,           Adjective           taste. She           Adverb           reached out one           Noun           toward the           Noun           when, suddenly, a           Adjective           and           Adjective           cat dashed           Adverb           across her           Noun - Plural           after a           Adjective          ,           Adjective           rat. Surprised, April jumped and tripped over a           Noun          , falling straight into the lovely           Noun                     Noun          . Splat! She fell right in, smashing the           Noun           all over the           Adverb           cleaned floor. The king and queen came bursting through the kitchen door to see what had caused the noise and saw April covered in           Noun                     Noun          . She was           Verb - Present ends in ING          . What a mess! The king and queen didn't scold much, though April was very sad to learn that the           Noun                     Noun           had been a           Adjective           surprise to celebrate her being so diligent in her dance lessons. If only she had not sneaked away! Maybe next time she'll remember to be a little more self-controlled.
