My Summer in Marketing -- A Madlib

It was a Noun come true when I found out my application and Noun landed me the temporary marketing position. After a lot of curiosity, I'd Adverb be able to see firsthand what REI's Marketing Department was all about.

The first couple of weeks were a Adjective a review crash-course in all things Noun. There was reporting to be done, project plans to Verb - Base Form, numbers stories to understand and help others to tell, proofs to Verb - Base Form, and Noun - Plural, lots of Noun - Plural!

In the newness, I found familiarity and comfort in knowing the Noun of REI. I was happy to offer this Noun my customer insight earned from working in Sales & Customer Support, and I was even Adjective to have those insights Verb - Past Tense. One thing this team did very well was to bring me into the action. From the beginning I was encouraged to contribute and my Noun - Plural were valued.

This summer, I also took the opportunity to meet a lot of Noun - Plural. My conversations helped me better understand the org chart, as well as determine areas of interest, and opportunities for collaboration within the Marketing Department. Although things are pretty Adjective around here, the level of Noun was very high as almost everyone I reached out to was able to make time to meet with me. consideration of everything I've learned, and the amount of people that I've Verb - Past Tense within a relatively short period of time, I'd say this summer was mission accomplished! Unfortunately just as I'm Verb - Present ends in ING greater familiarity with the work, and confidence in my ability to contribute more Adverb, my time with this group is nearly over.

I appreciate all the encouragement and the feedback I've Verb - Past Tense along the way, as well as the resources and help with projects. The biggest surprise and greatest honor Verb - Past Tense when I received a Zippy award for my work on the direct mail binders for Annie. I thank Katherine and each one of you for making that happen!
