The brutal client meeting

I woke up this morning dreading my meeting with an important client. His name is Don Noun.

Seriously, who gives themselves such an Adjective name? When I got to the office this Adjective Adjective man was standing next to my desk with a huge pile of Noun. Instead of taking me through the project, he threw them up in the air and let them fall all over my office Office object.

Then in a frightening voice he said to me, "Kido, you have to live like a Animal;

Of course I had no clue what that means. Darn clients! But I nodded anyway and said to him, "Sir, you have some great Plural noun in your Noun but I don't know how this will benefit our project.";

Being the Adjective Fruit that he is, he got on his Body part and lifted his Body part in the air. Then he said to me, "I want my next campaign to look like me - a Adjective Job role with a _____perspective on life.";

That's when my _____juices kicked in. I had the perfect idea for his next campaign. I instantly knew I had to hire a dozen beautiful celebrities, like Haifa , Nancy , and _____. Then I had to create a great TV spot like the Melody commercial and take all the credit it for it.

The client loved it. He gave me a big kiss on the forehead and walked out. It was a great meeting afterall.
