The brutal client meeting

I woke up this morning dreading my meeting with an important client. His name is Don _____ First name _____.

Seriously, who gives themselves such an _____ Adjective _____ name? When I got to the office this _____ Adjective _____

_____ Adjective _____ man was standing next to my desk with a huge pile of _____ Plural noun _____. Instead of taking me through the project, he threw them up in the air and let them fall all over my office _____ Office object _____. _____

Then in a frightening voice he said to me, "Kido, you have to live like a _____ Animal _____;

Of course I had no clue what that means. Darn clients! But I nodded anyway and said to him, "Sir, you have some great _____ Plural noun _____ in your _____ Noun _____ but I don't know how this will benefit our project.";

Being the _____ Adjective _____ Fruit _____ that he is, he got on his _____ Body part _____ and lifted his _____ Body _____ _____ part _____ in the air. Then he said to me, "I want my next campaign to look like me - a _____ Adjective _____

_____ Dream job as a kid _____ with a _____ Adjective _____ perspective on life.";

That's when my _____ Adjective _____ juices kicked in. I had the perfect idea for his next campaign. I instantly knew I had to hire a dozen beautiful celebrities, like _____ Celebrity _____ _____ Celebrity _____ and _____ Celebrity _____. Then I had to create a great TV spot like the _____ Favorite commercial _____ commercial and take all the credit it for it.

The client loved it. He gave me a big _____ Nice gesture _____ on the _____ Body part _____ and walked out. It was a great meeting afterall.
