A Fond Farewell to the Langrehr Family

After several [_____ Adjective _____] years in Seattle, the moment has arrived for the Langrehr family to return to their [_____ Adjective _____] home in Munich.

They will miss so many things about Pacific Northwest: The [animal]s, the [Seattle landmark], and most of all the [_____ Adjective _____] people.

When they first arrived in the Seattle area, they found their Eastside neighbors and colleagues odd. All these Americans wanted to do was to drink [beverage], eat [plural noun], and [verb] in Lake Sammamish on cloudy days.

But gradually, they got into the Northwest lifestyle. They would [verb] every day - even in the rain. Dominik would [verb] with his Microsoft colleagues, and the kids made [adjective] friends in school and [verb past tense] on the soccer field. And Dominik joined and helped lead Act of Giving, managing the foundation's communications and transforming its collaboration technology.

Soon the Langrehr family will be back in Munich, eating fine German [noun], reuniting [adverb] with their friends, and launching the first European chapter of the Act of Giving Foundation.
