How to Embrace Being a Leapling, Part 1

| So, you were born on February 29 and yo | u have you | ur birthday | every 4 yea | rs. Not bac | l, right? Exc | ept for, you're 4 |
|--|--------------|-------------|---------------|--------------|---------------|-------------------|
| times younger than your true age (4 = | Number | , 8 = | Number | , 12 = | Number | , etc). You |
| start having questions: | | | | | | |
| - Why isn't my birthday on the calendar? | | | | | | |
| - When am I supposed to celebrate my bin | rthday? | | | | | |
| - How old am I, really? | | | | | | |
| - Will I get verb - Past Tense in | Noun | ? | | | | |
| It's really not as as you = as you = verb - Base Form . Verb - Base Form | | | apling is a _ | Noun | , which y | ou should |
| 1. First of all, you should learn about the | Adjecti | ve exp | olanation on | WHY we | have leap ye | ears. Although |
| most modern calendar years have | ımber (| days, a con | plete | Noun a | round the _ | Noun (|
| one Solar year) takes approximately | Number | _ days and | Number | hours | s. An extra _ | Number |
| hours thus verb - Present ends in S eve. | ryNu | ımber y | ears, requiri | ng that an | extra calend | ar day be added |
| to the calendar wit | th the sun's | S Adjec | ive pos | ition. With | out the adde | ed day, the |
| seasons would move back in the calendar | , leading to | o confusio | about whe | n to underta | ake activitie | s dependent on |
| weather, | | | | | | |

| , or hours of daylight. |
|--|
| In other words, we have leap days in order to be with the Earth's rotation around the sun. So |
| don't were born on a very day of the year! |
| 2. Another thing you should learn is that although leap years are EVERY 4 years, it isn't always exactly EVERY |
| 4 years. A year divisible by would not be considered a leap year unless that year was also |
| exactly divisible by In other words, years 1600 and 2000, were century leap years, and so will |
| be 2400 and 2800. However, years 1700, 1800, 1900, 2100, 2200, 2300 and 2500 were/will be common years |
| since they are not evenly divisible by 400. |
| |
| 3. You're obviously the same age as anybody else born in the same year as you. You may be |
| Tense for being only 4 years old on your birthday, but it's not really that much a big deal. Do |
| the math4 leap years = common years, so you ARE 16 at age 16. Basically, you're 4 times |
| younger than your actual age, which doesn't mean anything in common years. But if nobody can |
| that, you have to realize that people are sometimes. |
| |
| 4. You can your birthday whenever you feel, simply because you're special! Whether it be |
| February 28 or, or even both, you're still reminded that you're a very |
| Adjective |

| Noun Noun Noun birthday makes you | Adjective . Or if you want, you can even have a half birthday, |
|---|---|
| Month Number ! But only in | a non-leap year, that is. |
| 5. You're legally an adult at age | (or 5, if you wish). In fact, you're legally an adult at the age that |
| is considered legal, depending on where you l | ive. By the time you're "actually", you would be |
| in your (and probably dead to | oo). So you're legally an adult at between ages 4-6 (16-24). |
