Sinbad's First Voyage

In the first voyage, Sinbad goes to in order to restore his fortune through trade after squandering the Noun - Plural his father had left him. When the ship arrives at what appears to be a island, Sinbad goes ashore only to discover that the 'island' is really a gigantic Noun . The Same Noun dives deep into the sea and the ship leaves without Sinbad. He is saved byverb - Present ends in ING into a wooden from the ship that he finds floating in the water. He is washed ashore on another island where, after hearing his story, the king asks him to the merchants and sailors in his city.
One day, Sinbad's own arrives and he finds his are still on board, and so he is able to sell them and return to Baghdad a rich
