Sonnet-Writing: To Himself - CATHERINE MATEL - MADDIE PEAKE

Young men should not write _____type of literature_____, if they dream

Some day to reach the bright bare _____body part_____ of _____european city_____:

To such, sweet thoughts and _____candy_____ feelings seem

As though, like foreign things, they rarely came.

Eager as men when haply they have heard

Of some new songster, some gay-feathered _____animal_____,

That hath over blue seas strayed in hope to find

In our thin foliage here a _____Adjective_____ _____food_____

Fain would they catch the bright things in their mind,

And cage them into sonnets as they come.

No; they should serve their _____relatives_____ most sparingly,

Till the ripe time of _____fruits_____, when young thoughts fail,

Then their sad sonnets, like old _____teachers name_____, might be

Merry as youth, and yet grey-haired and hale.
