seagulls

Seagulls are Noun - Plural. They will Verb almost anything. These birds have learned life is easier if they hang out around humans. Noun - Plural can be quite a nuisance, however we have to give these Noun - Plural some credit: they are smart enough to know where Noun is plentiful. Humans feed them and they Verb - Non 3rd Person Singular Present around for the grub. If you've ever been to any shore point on the Proper Noun Coast you know exactly what I am talking about. For Noun, in Wildwood, Proper Noun, they will Verb down and steal a Adjective fry right out of your cup. Yes, that is while you are holding the container of fries. People who visit this shore points quickly learn to Verb their food. It is currently against Noun - Plural in a lot of East Proper Noun shore points to feed these Noun - Plural for this reason. The more we Verb them, the more they will stick around. Verb - Present Tense seagulls can be a lot of fun. It is Adverb cool to see them swoop down and grab the grub in mid-air, however, be advised they have Adjective toilet habits and will do their Noun whenever they feel the Noun. Yes, it's very common for them to drop their waste on you at any given moment. Tourists love to feed--it's fun and Adjective; locals on the other Noun have to deal with these birds Adverb and pretty much consider them a messy Noun.
