Hello Gentlemen!

The one thing that drove me absolutely crazy about my _____Noun_____ _____Proper Noun_____ was the way he drove . He would _____Verb_____ on driving in the dead center of a two way intersection, and no matter how much I complained, sulked, and _____Verb - Past Tense_____, nothing made a dent. The only consolation I found was the thought that at least the cars coming _____Preposition or subordinating conjunction_____ us, were staying in their lane. _____Adjective_____ enough, I _____Adverb_____ resigned myself to my fate, but I would still _____Verb_____ all too often while on the road. Well, the day finally came when I was to meet Bill's family. We headed to the small hick town that he was _____Preposition or subordinating conjunction_____ in _____Proper Noun_____, and had a grand ol' time with his folks. It was when we went out for a drive in the old family pick up that I _____Verb - Past Tense_____ that things could _____Verb_____ quite a bit _____Adverb - Comparative_____. "Don't worry about my _____Noun_____ driving in the center of the road," said Bill's mom with a big _____Adjective_____ smile, as we headed onto a two way intersection . "THAT'S WHAT EVERYONE DOES AROUND HERE!!"
