Hello Gentlemen!

The one thing that drove me absolutely crazy about my Non Prover Nonn was the way he drove . He would Verb on driving in the dead center of a two way intersection, and no matter how much I complained, sulked, and Verb - Past Tense, nothing made a dent. The only consolation I found was the thought that at least the cars coming Preposition or exbordinating conjunction us, were staying in their lane. Adjuctive enough, I Adverb resigned myself to my fate, but I would still Verb all too often while on the road. Well, the day finally came when I was to meet Bill's family. We headed to the small hick town that he was Preposition or subordinating conjunction in Proper Nonn, and had a grand ol' time with his folks. It was when we went out for a drive in the old family pick up that I Verb - Past Tense that things could Verb quite a bit Adverb - Comparative. "Don't worry about my Nonn driving in the center of the road," said Bill's mom with a big Adverby smile, as we headed onto a two way intersection . "THAT'S WHAT EVERYONE DOES AROUND HERE!!"
