The Water Fight

On a Adverb hot day on July 4th, 2007 was the most fun that I ever had with my grandparents, uncle, big sister ,little brother, and our friends. It all started in my grandparents brick house when my grandfather had dumped a bucket of water on my uncle Proper Noun. He thought it was my big sister Proper Noun because she was laughing. He didn't know who it was so he went to get a Adjective bowl of Adjective water and poured it on her. We was all Verb - Present ends in ING my little brother Proper Noun had got a cup and tried to throw it on me but I Verb - Past Tense outside and everybody had ran after me.

We all had pots,cups,and bowls of Noun water Pronoun it on each other. My grandmother was Adverb laughing because she was on the Adjective Adjective balcony so she didn't get wet. "Interjection!", the kids from the neighborhood Verb - Past Tense as they asked to join in with us. After we all if that calmed down, we went into the house to clean up all the water and eat some of my grandpa's famous homemade Adjective Adjective wings.

I really loved spending time with my grandparents before they past, because they always told me stories about when my mom was little and what they did when they were little. They will not be forgotten.
