

Pesach

1. Adjective
-

Pesach

There once was a nation that was taken by the Adjective nation into slavery. They were beaten and worked extremely hard. They had to build sky high pyramids in quick sand. Not only that, but their baby boys were thrown into the river! The mothers cried and screamed out of pain. One day, a man named Moshe came along and said that he would be their savior. When telling the king of Egypt, he was mocked. To prove his honesty, he gave ten punishments. It began simply with the water turning into red blood and ended with the death of the firstborns. After the king realized that he was going to die, ran to Moshe and told them to leave immediately. The Jews left that night with Matzah on their shoulders. As they were walking they came up to the Yam Suf. Realizing that there was no where to turn because the Egyptians were behind them, they started to panic. However one man jumped into the water with full faith that he would be saved. A miracle then happened! The water split in half. So, the Jews walked peacefully through the ocean. Although the Egyptians thought they would too be spared, the water closed up and they all drowned. Yet, as they people drowned, all their precious possessions which were with them floated to the top. Not only were the Jews spared, they were now a wealthy nation!